We are very excited to kick off a new year of art challenges at Goldfield. This year we thought we would shake things up a little and instead of focusing on an artist, we are going to use a different material or resource as the basis for each new challenge.

We have been amazed by the high number of entries for these competitions and the quality of work has been outstanding. It has also been wonderful to see obvious collaboration between parents and children when completing the mini-masterpieces.

This theme of this term’s challenge is Newspaper or Books.

On Friday the children had an assembly to explain the new challenge and were given a range of ideas. However, with a school focus on mindfulness and wellbeing this year, we do not want to limit the children’s creativity. Therefore there is no right or wrong way to explore this challenge. We want the children to be free to express themselves creatively in any way they wish.

Please see attached examples that may be used as a starting point.

The new challenges will run on a termly basis. The deadline for entries for this competition will be just before the Christmas break, on Thursday 21st December.

If there are siblings at Bishop Wood, who enjoyed the competition last year, they are welcome to participate and submit entries. However, winners will be selected from the children currently attending Goldfield School.

Please Note: To encourage others to join the competition, the Art Challenge display board is created from early entries, so submit early to get your work on the board.
